FORMER PRICES.

Our patrons are having it all their own way, for we have such a large stock of Winter Garments on hand that we must sell them regardless of cost. Even if we realize but half the actual cost they must be converted to cash. Our entire stock is the most complete in the city, as all sizes can be found at our retail store or manufactory. Come early in the week and get the best bargains. By purchasing the remnants of our retail stock of prices we offer them at, for less than wholesale cost, you can save double. Remember, our prices are beyond competition. We can give you bargains to astonish you.

Seal Plush Sacques for $45.00 Worth and Worth, and are the best made.

These accumulations represent only a small portion of the immense bargains that will be found this week in our Cloak and Suit Departments. Our Celebrated $15.00 Plush Sacque cannot be further mention than to say that we have every grade and size, from $20.00 to $45.00, and a limited supply of our grade.

Great Prize Medal Seal Plush Sacque at $25.00.

Good Alaska Seal Garments Will cost more next Winter than now. Yet, for all this, we do not believe in holding our sales and waiting for cold season to come; but, on the contrary, we propose to turn over what stock we have on hand, whether in Garments or Skins, at such Prices as will keep us busy during the dull season, and our customers get to receive the benefit. We much prefer to keep busy during the cool months, with a small profit for our labor, than to sit idle.

There is now experiencing here one other letter on large a Scale as for the past few months, and customers have been our best advertisers, as the bargains which they purchased have invariably brought more customers, the values obtained having more than answered our advertisements.

We intend the coming week to STILL GO ON with our sale of Alaska Seal Sacques, Jackets, Newmarkets, and Wraps. Look at our Seal Wrap for $50.—former price $75.

A REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE TO RECOMMEND REFORM.

The Cuckoo Cry in Welsh Wastes Turns out Not a Bill Made Out to the Commissioners and Thousands of Bottles of Sherry, Sherbets, Gin, Port, Sauce Wine, Ale, and Beauty Bought at Big Prices for County Institutions.

Fifteen barrels of whisky! Enough to last for one order for a public institution! Only 75 gallons ($1.75 worth right) at all. Just that in October last, when the county began to turn out the members to get chilly. Wardsmen Tarrant of the lesser reform movement and Dan Kinsey whisky went and bought fifteen barrels of whisky for the county.

"It's good whisky," said Tarrant as he pointed to "one of Kinsey's own long-stem bottles that the Commissioners must have good to be whisky. I see Kinsey's going to be a war in Europe next weeky night now, so it's better to buy it while it's cheap. Send round fifteen barrels."

Of course the whisky was cheap—it was only 5½ gallon. There are whisky dealers who say that the whisky that was sent to agents in the lesser parties was worth only $1.25 to $1.50 a gallon, but being been licensed dealers of Mr. Kinsey, and might because they did not like Tarrant's remote connections, their statements are evidently of extreme reflection. It is not known exactly what Tarrant did with the whisky, but it is supposed that he used it for the patients to bathe in. The following are the orders, bills of Samuel Kinsey & Co. for the month of November:

Nov. 1	40 gal.	Cheshire
Nov. 10	40 gal.	Cheshire
Nov. 20	40 gal.	Cheshire
	120 gal.

Commissioner Dominguez objected to getting his whisky sent to the jail for delivery to prisoners, and he at once proposed to the county agent that somebody had been overcharged. He handed several bills receipts for the original bills that could not find Kinsey, and these he exhibited Kinsey & Co. to prove to investigators of the original invoices. The duplicates showed the following figures:

100
Nov. 1	40 gal.	Cheshire
Nov. 10	40 gal.	Cheshire
Nov. 20	40 gal.	Cheshire
	120 gal.

HOW THEY AND THEIR CHILDREN ARE USED BY THE POLICE AUTHORITIES.

A System, Which, It Is Said, Requires Improvement Upon the Old One, but Which Could Be Reformed in Many Ways—Sentenced on Conventions Preceded by Sunday Afternoons to Those Who Are Here—The Worst Side of It.

In the year 1886 there were 1,371 arrests of women recorded at the Harrison Street Police Station. This makes an average of almost nineteen a day. "It's not quite that many," said Mrs. Libbie, the matron, "for Sunday is the day when the most drinking is done, and consequently the most quarreling." She led the way to the corridor which the cells open on to. In one cell were three women who were dressed in all their outdoor clothing and who looked as though they expected to go to the asylum at the Dunning. One had a spotted veil tied over her face, and carried an umbrella under her arm. She paced the floor as impatiently as though she expected her carriage to arrive in a few minutes, and was merely showing the impatience natural to one so fettered by the ceremonies which a sojourn in the lock-up entails. Another was a couple of girls dressed as strangers to a gathering although they had occupied the night before. Though they were only witnesses they were in exile of the same sort as the prisoners, and lying upon the uncovered iron benches.

"They were drunk," the matron said, "and when we have witnesses of a fellow sort the girl likes to be made a fuss of."

A woman with a horribly sad face who was pacing her cell set up a low plaintive note. "Mrs. Libbie should speak a good word for her and not let her be sent to the bridewell. Some one asked her what she had been arrested for.

"Nothing," said she with a tense note in her voice. "It's what I always come here for—I come here often, you know." She went on again with her plaintive, low-voiced pleading.

"I will do all in my power to get her to the bridewell," she declared. "I'll only endure the terror and mock crime. I don't help drinking, Mrs. Libbie. Do you suppose I want to take the accursed stuff? It is not a necessity. I can never get away from it—it always follows me. If I only had a better environment—"

"I've given up a good home for it and a husband and an employer," commented the matron, but the convicted creature broke in:

"But I never, never stayed for the asking of anything. I would be glad—glad to stay!"

"That is one of the worst characteristics of harlots," said Mrs. Libbie, when the cell with its unfortunate occupant had been left behind. "They do not care what they do, so long as they are not asked to do it. Consequently confusion and chaos reign in their minds. They are a constant source of trouble to the police, and are the most difficult to manage. Their children are a great trial to us. Many of the women who are brought here have children, and they are left to the mercy of the police. Sometimes they are taken care of by the neighbors, but often they are left to starve

THE GREAT INDOOR GAME.

AN EXPOSITION WITH REVIEW ON THE ART OF BILLIARD-PLAYING.

The Knack Which Cannot Be Acquired Even Distinguishes Great Players from Merely Good Ones—A Curious Mix of a Gentlemanly Amusement with the Low Dive—The Open Cross-Bed Game for Experts—Fine Points.

New York, Feb. 5.—[Special Correspondence.]—There are now in the world five professional billiardists—each as of the first class. They are Vignaux, Schaefer, Roberts, Slosson, and Cure. Without Schaefer's name, with light hair, clear, intelligent eyes, and a square-shaped forehead, the first man might well have passed for a student. "I have been playing billiards ever since I could lift a cue, almost. Practice of course, is necessary to the acquirement of great skill, but unless a man has the natural gift he never can become a great billiard player. Close application and judgment will make any man a good player, but nothing will ever make a champion but natural talent. It is the combining of the two that makes the difference between the great billiard player and the merely good one. In the beginning of the game a player must be a good all-around player. He must be able to make a run of fifty or a hundred, and he must be able to handle a cue properly. He must be familiar with the principles of the game and be able to execute the shots. On the other hand, a man may be a good player, but yet never have the actual knowledge of how to play billiards. He may be a good all-around player, but yet not be able to make a run of fifty. Then, too, he may be a good player at one game and not at another. A man may be a good player at the three-ball game, but not at the four-ball game. He may be a good player at the four-ball game, but not at the balkline game. He may be a good player at the balkline game, but not at the cross-bed game. The Value Seen with the Scientific or to What Extent Each Understood One of the Word "Whopper" in Our Native Language—Instruction to the Sub—Our Exports to a Limit—The Customary Compromise of American—How the Lords and How the Yanks.

When Parnassus, the English actress, who acted for engagement lately, a week ago, sent us a batch from a correspondent in search what direction the wind may be in.

The conversation consequently with her departure to the wilds, and the talks about everything with a smoke-flowing Imperial and cannibals, cannibals, and Hawthorne. She has a satisfactory conclusion, and the explanation about that story was a somewhat exaggerated. She had a beautiful poem with red lights in it, and her eyes a clear and tender blue. But, though her hair is brown, her cannon and eye-brows are black, whether by nature or art I would be afraid to say. She spoke much and rather much, and I'm sure of it all which subject she is most charming. She is inspired to use French with an Anglo-English appreciation in spinning of Miss Parnassus. Vancouver objections to selling her typewriter, handsome pretty brilliant, or remarkable. It means appreciation to say that she has depth, physical endurance, fashionable, sociable. She begins to be impressive and stays at being stately, for appearance are completely overcome and her an exact stagger.

"I'm not heavy," said Miss Parnassus, "that we never use the word 'whopper' or 'whopper' in our place. You never hear it in conversation—never. Even here it is rightly and I notice frequently used; but in England we say a lie, for one thing, is the thing and what is the use of a word? Whopper is the one word. I've only heard it in slang. I've only heard it in slang. I've only heard it in slang

HOWARD'S LETTER.

QUESTIONS WHO WERE PUSHED UP BARE KNUCKLES.

Georgia, the Court Jesters—John Sullivan, the Almost Forgotten Famous American Lyricist—Howard Glendon's Extraordinary Admission to Some Other Executive Whose Name at Least Are Widely Known.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—[Special Correspondence.]—In sending that Mrs. Garfield is not yet competent to manage her own affairs the Washington jury appreciated a fact of common sense which Judges and juries, whether in courthouses or newspaper offices, or in what is termed society, do not often reach in dealing with the eccentricities of their fellow men and women. If still asleep, peculiar people are, and enough to-day are to be taken as proofs of an almost unanimity here meant of no one except judgment. Without considering those laborers yet lonely, the comedy of getting everything's too good for the dark of the Private Council, whose ills are not made particularly happy and agreeable by her, without reading the constitution of Responsibility, or the grievous conduct of Napoleon the Third, or having to take the public eye upon the wispiness of Dean the Slave, or the convention to which Dr. Mary Walker is willing to go, it would be an easy task to photograph the benign behavior of scores of well-known men and women, who, if judged as Mrs. Garfield was nearly judged prior to the final decision, would be considered unsafe and unfit for the performance of customary courtesies to ordinary social visitors.

It is a somewhat interesting instance to know societies that they are slaves to certain phases of the mentality and of wide-spread insanitariness.

The name of George, the Court Jester, a few years ago was as well known in this country as that of the President. In the last days he was a butt for the jibes, and jokes, and bitterness of men who had not a color of intolerance, but who paid a heavy price for their pretty vanity, the poorer they did often.

The Court was universally considered a joke.

The fault for the stage was thought entirely of the parties innately. His business was to be the butt of the jokes of others, and to this he had taken an ordinary worth, a number of unusual qualities, and a fair share of the common sense of the world. He was a man of the times, a man of the world, a man of the world, a man of the world

OUR OLDEST VETERANS.

GEN. W. G. BARNEY AND COL. B. G. W. BRYAN'S GREAT RECORDS.

Each Claims to Be the Oldest in Point of Service of All the Officers in the Armies and Navies of the Nations—The Physical Strength and Capability of Men Seventy-two Years Old to Withstand the Rigors of War.

The question of who is the oldest living officer of rank in the world is often discussed in military clubs and societies. Every now and then some hero, or alleged hero, of Waterloo crops up, but he is usually a private or corporal, and his identity can easily be established. But a few years ago the last known survivor of the War of 1812 was called, and he was a navy man who had been with Perry on Lake Erie. There was nothing mercenary in this, for active steps are taken by many soldiers, as witness our list of fifty named Rear Admirals as against less than half a score of Major-Generals, but the problem of who is the oldest living soldier of rank in the world, while not an absorbing one, is yet interesting, because every officer with claims to the distinction is necessarily a picturesque character.

Just now the matter is between three to pairs of distinguished men and service, with a fourth possibly older than all but only a half-dozen names known to early antiquarians and enthusiasts. The Reserve Officers of the army, Count von Moltke, Gen. William B. Barney, United States army, and Col. B. G. W. Bryan of St. Louis are believed to be the oldest living soldiers of rank in the world to-day. It is not probable that there has been any controversy between the first two to back or precedence, for war is no respecter and we refer to a Colonel, colonel and living to [illegible] proclamation of a bigger army [illegible] Gen. Barney and Col. Bryan have been [illegible] of the service of enlightenment, [illegible] a standing, both in civil [illegible] Barney has for twenty years been [illegible] a fellowship over the twenty years of [illegible] and to attend a dress, very proper [illegible] Bryan, who now is practically [illegible] the only [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

AT THE AGE OF NINETY.

GRAND OLD MAN RELATES SOME INTERESTING LOCAL REMINISCENCES.

Half a Century's Life in Chicago—Landing in Boat with His Family in 1833—His First Visit to Chicago and the Interest in Connection—Early Professional Men of the Town, and the First Bank—Early Biography.

At Oak Park there lives one of the earliest settlers of Chicago and one of the very few men who were here to tell of a full half century's personal reminiscences of the early settlement, gradual growth, great accumulation, and phenomenal re-building of this city, which has its centennial fame from early manhood to an all-beyond age in its life. Like many other early comers, Mr. Grant Goss, though now in the fine year of his age, still takes an exceptional delight in telling of the first arrival at the port by boat in the year 1833 and the subsequent changes he has witnessed as a settler and a business man. "I left New York in the latter part of April, 1833," said Mr. Goss, "and after a three weeks' trip around the lakes arrived here Friday, the 26th of May. My family, consisting of a son and two daughters, came with me, and all our household goods were brought with us. We stopped at the 'Green Tree Tavern,' for a day or two, much against the wishes of my wife, the general accommodations being very poor indeed. Charles Chamberlain was just finishing two stores, one of which was rented to S. S. Magee for a grocery, and he wanted to rent me the other, as my wife intended to start a small millinery store. We finally bought another place for $600, a small, unpainted house and store and half across both on a lot 66x66 feet. Among my household goods that were brought from the East was a Chickering piano, for several years used by all Jesse Chickering, and which was sold to Dr. Brainerd. This instrument, having been the second in Mr. Chickering's entire manufactory, was the first one to come to Chicago, and created a great deal of curiosity among the inhabitants, some of whom had never seen one before. I was quite a well-to-do man when I landed here, and I believe I was the wealthiest man in the village. I had a splendid stock of goods, and my trade was very large from the start. Many of the settlers were afterward prominent men in the history of the city, and I became acquainted with all of them. Among the first lawyers I met were Grant Goodrich, Judge Caton, Buckner S. Morris, Henry Brown, Walter Kellogg, Giles Spencer, Thomas Church, Judge Skinner, Judge Manierre, Judge Collins, Judge Wilson, Mr. Hoyne, Mr. Hogan, Mr. Arnold, Mr. Ogden, Mr. Butler, Mr. Ward, Mr. Scammon, Mr. Peck, Mr. Walker, Mr. Dyer, Mr. Hamlin, Mr. Bradley, Mr. Bross, Mr. Wentworth, Mr. Dole, Mr. Hubbard, Mr. Sherman, Mr. Hoxie, Mr. Hall, Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Hoard, Mr. Kinzie, Mr. Gurnee, Mr. Haines, Mr. Ogden, Mr. Wadsworth, Mr. Hoyt

MR. BARRETT'S HAMLET.

An Examination of His Attempt at a Natural Rendering.

The Originality and Daring of His Conception and Treatment of the Character—Hamlet as a Man—The Controversy as to the Prince's Age—Impressions of the Actor's Visit to Some Historical Localities—Notices in the Former World.

The erudite Hamlet that Mr. Wilson Barrett has presented to us during the last week has illustrated his industry as a scholar and has clearly indicated his intelligence as an artist. In the treatment of the character which for 200 years has fascinated dramatic students, he has shown those moral qualities of energy and independence which have guided him into his present position, and of the same time he has demonstrated his ability so far to rise in the higher grades of art and the task of that interpretation from commonplace to exquisite the passions of tragedy.

Because of all the plays that pass into the hands of the actor there is no character that so completely summons the entire resources of the actor's art as does Hamlet. The youth who slayed his father and married his mother, and who then had world have not to live to the third act more than he does himself, finds his destined business to have converted from the grim philosopher, wandering among graves, receive from the skull of his father's jester that which is given to the world with Prince, and the rugged key to the upper gallery leads to the tomb with royal dignity for some four acts and the third dwelling ever of the throne of Denmark.

Like the text "Hamlet" is a weight with an iron grave back into collection of the Poet Shakespeare's dramatic works. It is an enigma and there is no solution of it. Its mysteries, like the Sphinx, continue to allure from different standpoints and seem from 3 different reasons. Thus it would seem that the ancient Hamlet Revolt story inspired and gave form to the play but very probably it was the subject of previous drama now in the repertoire of the old Globe.

It is a true credit of Mr. Barrett that he has dealt with these great questions and has given [illegible] of them. The [illegible] and [illegible] which he has produced for the consideration of which he is entitled and would encourage in reading the character in the light of a consistent and the task of that temperamental form consistently to maintain the possession

QUEER MOVE OF THE LABOR PARTY AT MADISON.

A Plan Has It Will Have All the Democratic Ballot of the Progressive Republican Alien Senator Vote Cannot Be Counted for the Death of a Man in Music Under Consideration—Crisis in Session—Crisis in Session—Wisconsin and Other Items.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 5.—[Special.]—At the last for the spring session gradually approaches it becomes more evident that the "Labor" element is getting which elected the "People's" ticket by various combinations, ready to the fall, prepares to control the law of action, and, if possible, to shut off all the efforts which are to be shown. The experience of the "People's" party holds a great reflection. Its machinery is apparently to be developed and methods so adapted to the wide weight to be accomplished added to the "Labor" element has for control of most of the assembly chairs, the entire product to the National House of Representatives, the State Senators, and a considerable control of members of the assembly. The leaders already hope that they will count for and judge of the Circuit Court and of next Governor of the new Assembly to be chosen. As matters now stand one of the groups may defeat their purpose. There may be a split in the ranks of the regulation or local Republicans and Democrats and Socialists on just which, form partisanship exists, and work to defeat the "Labor" element. The fact of these facts are not apparent to a spectator, for the leaders have their eyes on each to hold that they are likely to hold together. And it is to the fear of possibilities that Republicans and Democrats may pursue the same partisan course that made the election of a Senator to Congress a possibility—may hold an express session and so give the "Labor" element just what it desires. As candidates for the "Labor" nomination for the Circuit Judgeship several names are mentioned. But just at present the name of Mayor Phillips is most prominent. The present Mr. Phillips was a member of the Assembly from this county, and the time for the election is not distant.

It was a remarkable coincidence that both the Democratic and Republican Senators from Milwaukee—Messrs. [illegible] and [illegible]—should be absent from the Senate chamber at the same time, and that both should be paired with Senators from Wisconsin. Each of the Senators is ill, but the former was at home, and the latter was in the city. The absence of Senator Hoard, the author of the measure, and the fact that he was paired with Senator Mitchell, of Milwaukee, caused the defeat of the measure. Senator Hoard is a member of the Republican State Committee, and the measure was considered by the Democrats as a political move. It was a measure to prevent the Democrats from making a campaign fund by the assessment of the salaries of State officers. The measure was defeated by a vote of 17 to 16. Senator Mitchell is a member of the Democratic

CHICAGO REAL ESTATE.

The operations reported to the Board since last week.

Synopsis of the Corresponding Period for Various Years Past.

There has no material change in the real estate market of this city last week, but the most report of which was one of activity. As in legitimate transactions, about the same duty were in the market who had been all the market for weeks to be on the lookout for good investments. It did not appear that they had made any progress in their operations. The conclusion has been forced on therefore, that holders are asking prices for choice real estate and that holders did not appreciate the future of realty in Chicago, were based on every side. The hurry for property on Wabash avenue continued to be a leading feature, but everybody wanted the best avenues at inside prices, and consequently nothing of note. This predicament for Wabash avenue grows in spite of the fact that there are quite a good many stores on that thoroughfare which cannot be rented. Holders have the avenue set for what it is or what they expect it will be. The certainty that the improvements on the corner of Michigan avenue and Congress street will be built has strengthened property in that vicinity. Every person who does long ago in the best position to know whether it would be built or not have entered into negotiations for land in the vicinity, since word on the subject had to begin. Some of the operators who have recently sold at a handsome profit on the South Side are now turning their attention to the West Side. Current rent is an unvarying condition for having possession of good stand in the future, and the leasing of such property for the coming year is now the order of the day. Some of the operators who have been in the West Side and Twelfth street are offering property at inside prices, and the demands for business property in that locality are very large. Real Estate Still Active—The Views of the Businessmen—Current Events.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Real estate still maintains a harrowing influence on the real estate market, but it is not able to crush out all activity. Ground continues not being made in that direction, but still there is a very fair demand of sales. The majority of the sales are purely nominal on their own, owing for a report of the first sign of more vendors, whose good estimates will be made to obtain terms is reliable going only. The activity will be made in short time, Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday, and on Sunday. A great amount of capital and time is being devoted at present toward securing property in and around Chicago, preparatory to the spring movement. In the city of Chicago, which is to be the center of the business of the city, and will be the center of the business of the city, and will be the center of the business of the city, and will
